

Innovation Through Self Motivation - by David Mielcarek, Sep 30, 2014

Sitting in our chairs,
as we all often do.
Staring at our work,
and thinking "oh boo hoo".

"Why is this so hard,
why so much to do?"
You turn your chair around,
and look at your crew.

There are thinkers and stinkers,
braggers and boars.
Some with their hair frazzled,
many want more.

But, in the middle of the fray,
comes a sparkle in your eye.
And you exclaim to yourself,
"Look at some as they try!"

They are tinkering and tweaking, adjusting and rethinking.
The 'old' ways won't do,
and they chip away the glue.

Sticky old methods,
and gummed up old shoes.
Are thrown in the garbage,
'Making things better!' - they choose.

So as you sit there and wonder,
"Why tasks are stinky crap!"
Change the way they are handled, and wear "Eyes Are Open!" cap.
